

GOOD TASTE WITH TANJI

KUU Restaurant a feast for the senses

There's a sushi spot on Houston's West Side pulling off pairing perfection, and you'll get to see all the delicious details this weekend on our TV show, Goodtaste with Tanji. You can watch every Sunday at 5:30 a.m. on KPRC, so unless you're just an early bird, set your DVR!

Everything at KUU Restaurant is a feast for the senses! From the way the food is plated and presented to the visually stunning décor with its high-tech interior design. The name KUU (pronounced "koo") literally translates to 'the art of eating.' Here, food is the medium and the plates are the canvas!

You'll love meeting Executive Chef Adison Lee. Turns out he's a wine aficionado and a fan of pairing big reds with sushi and even spicy dishes. He gives us a fun lesson in pairing wines with seafood.

This skilled artisan has a gift for combining unusual textures and flavors into one big adventurous delight! We'll share more of Chef's unique combinations this weekend.

Be sure to tune in to see how you and a guest can win dinner for two! KUU Restaurant is at 947 Gessner Road, Houston. See www.kuurestaurant.com for more.

Then we'll take you to San Antonio to a spot known for long term love connections -- Stone Werks. "Let's meet at Stone Werks," is a phrase folks in the Alamo City have been saying for 20 years. Long known for Big Rock burgers, hand-tossed pizzas and super-sized salads, their menu now includes some new fine dining options at an affordable price! That's where their tantalizing pan-seared Ahi Tuna comes into play with a spicy toasted coconut sauce — I scored the recipe and will share it with you. Stone Werks has two San Antonio locations at 5807 Worth Parkway and 999 E. Basse Road.

And, don't think we're full yet. The party is just getting started with the best beats and eats from the ACL Music Festival. This year's show may already be a memory, but the good food found on its grounds lasts year-round! Outrageous sights, sounds and eats at Austin's famed Zilker Park. You can get more details and catch up on any of the episodes you've missed at Goodtaste.tv. But today, set those DVR's for KPRC, Sunday morning at 5:30 a.m.
